Dear Josh

Thank you for a heart warming "fan letter" regarding the enclosed.

I have read your most interesting account of getting started and, fortunately, stuck in the research mode at an early stage. I appreciated your dedication to Ryan & Patum with the accompanying hourly on the importance of "speaking out in a literary vein". We write all too little for the inspiration of the young; mostly to impress our peers or betters. There is something missing in the encouragement of creativity and the provision of environments conducive for it to flourish. In that regard Rockefeller had and has something that most others have not got — encouraging people like you!

With all good wishes + best regards
(and happy memories of early days)

Bob Murray
